Description:

The Assistance Programme for publishers registered in the United Kingdom was launched in 1993 by the Ministère des Affaires étrangères. Publishers who are leading, or intend to lead, an editorial policy which includes translations from the French into English in the fields of literature and human sciences may receive financial support for the translation of these books, and their promotion at the Institut français du Royaume-Uni. The Burgess Programme allows publishers to be supported directly through funds available in London at the Book office of the Institut français du Royaume-Uni

Terms and conditions:

Applications should be submitted to the Attaché du Livre (Book Attaché) before 21 December 2012.

Any publisher interested in this program should send:

- a formal letter of application and presentation of his policy on translation
- the questionnaire provided (page 2)
- a catalogue and backlist
- a copy of the French book(s)
- copies of the contracts with both French publisher and translator
- the publisher's bank details
- a proposed publicity schedule detailing how the publishers intend to publicise the author in the UK, in the run-up to, and surrounding the book's publication.

The Burgess committee meets at the beginning of January and replies are given end of January 2013.
